

What would it mean to have a high school in Martindale-Brightwood?

We are Schools Building Communities — an Indianapolis-based minority-led non-profit organization developing plans to establish both our first school and our corporate office in the Martindale-Brightwood neighborhood.

We are excited and look forward to building an excellent high school in Martindale-Brightwood as well as discovering and serving this community. To learn about the founders and the vast experience we bring, please visit our website at <http://www.sbcworks.org>.

We also have M-B resources online at that website, including the monthly activities calendar for the area from Making Connections Indy as well as a link to the PBS documentary Reviving The Spirit, which highlights this great community. It is also noteworthy that, according to historians and documents, there has not been a public high school in this neighborhood in more than a century. That is why we ask, “What would it mean to have a high school in Martindale-Brightwood?”

Please visit our website, click on “Martindale-Brightwood” and take our short survey that will be linked. That will assist us in framing the importance of an educational opportunity within the neighborhood.

www.sbcworks.org
click on Martindale-Brightwood

www.sbcworks.org
click on Martindale-Brightwood

www.sbcworks.org
click on Martindale-Brightwood

www.sbcworks.org
click on Martindale-Brightwood

www.sbcworks.org
click on Martindale-Brightwood

www.sbcworks.org
click on Martindale-Brightwood

www.sbcworks.org
click on Martindale-Brightwood

www.sbcworks.org
click on Martindale-Brightwood

www.sbcworks.org
click on Martindale-Brightwood

www.sbcworks.org
click on Martindale-Brightwood